

PROPEL EXECUTIVE LEADERS

Plano is a leading business community in North Texas. It is home to some of the most well-known brands, leaders in innovation, and a prominent driver of the North Texas economy. It's imperative that senior executives understand the critical issues facing the region, build relationships with top community leaders and actively understand how to address challenges and opportunities.

PROGRAM DESCRIPTION

The executive leadership program (ELP) encompasses various areas of interest, including infrastructure support (transportation, utilities, cybersecurity) and quality of life issues such as affordable housing, education, workforce development and healthcare. Equally, it also covers leading business topics, such as the region's economic vitality, growing industries and our diverse workforce.

Participants will gain a deep understanding of our region's formal and informal decision-making channels within its economic, political and civic structure, while aiming to establish and grow relationships with fellow executives new to the region or their role, fostering an even stronger sense of community.

PARTICIPANT GUIDELINES

↑ Participation in the ELP is by nomination from leading employers around the region. Ideal candidates are either new to their role or the North Texas region, having taken on their position or relocated in the past 12-18 months.
